9th March 2023

Dear Parents,

Don't you just love the British weather – too hot in the summer and too cold in the winter! I just wanted to update you with the snow situation based upon the predicted forecast.

School remains open today. However, we are monitoring the situation very carefully and so this may change depending on the conditions. There is the prediction of further snow on and off throughout the day, with a further potentially heavy downpour around 3.00pm. With this in mind, if parents wish to pick up their children early today, then we can facilitate this from 1.15pm onwards. This may also help stagger the traffic situation outside, which will be beneficial in these conditions.

Unfortunately, I have had to make the decision to cancel parents evening today to support the health and safety of our community and staff – in particular those that live a great distance from school. We will endeavour to rearrange this as soon as possible before the Easter Holidays and will provide further information on this in the next day or so.

We have sent out various texts today about clubs etc this evening. Please look out for these as they contain information about cancellations.

I am expecting school to be open as normal tomorrow, but there are mixed reports of snow overnight. Therefore, we will update you early in the morning should there be any changes to this.

Yours faithfully,

T Hinkley
